

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method of generating a network name for a base station (BS) in a wireless network, in which method a network name is selected and assigned to the base station (BS). The method comprises selecting an individual network name for the base station (BS), assigning said individual network name as the default network name of the base station (BS), and providing the base station (BS) with a marking from which said network name is read.

10 (Figure 2)